About the JLS

The Journal of Literature and Science (JLS) is a peer-reviewed academic journal published twice annually in Summer and Winter. The JLS was founded in 2007, and produced its first issue at the beginning of 2008. It was originally hosted by the University of Glamorgan's Research Centre for Literature, Arts and Science (2007-12), before moving to its own independent online site in March 2013, with the support of the University of Westminster. The journal's first, and present, editor is Professor Martin Willis, Professor of English at Cardiff University. The Advisory Board includes leading scholars of literature and science from around the world. The JLS is published in digital format, is entirely open access, and requires no subscription fee.

The journal is dedicated to the publication of academic essays on the subject of literature and science, broadly defined. Essays on the major forms of literary and artistic endeavour are welcome (the novel, short fiction, poetry, drama, periodical literature, visual art, sculpture, radio, film and television). The journal encourages submissions from all periods of literary and artistic history since the Scientific Revolution; from the Renaissance to the present day. The journal also encourages a broad definition of 'science': encapsulating both the history and philosophy of science and those sciences regarded as either mainstream or marginal within their own, or our, historical moment. However, the journal does not generally publish work on the social sciences. Within these confines, essays submitted to the journal may focus on the literary and scientific productions of any nation or group.

All essays should be interdisciplinary in focus, offering an original view of both the literary or artistic subject matter and the science or sciences under consideration. While essays on individual examples of literary and artistic production are welcomed, these should also seek to show the wider significance of their analyses and interpretations. The journal does not publish essays focused exclusively on literature or art, or exclusively on the history and philosophy of science.

Submission and Citation Information

Abstracts and articles for submission should be sent to the Editor, Professor Martin Willis, by email only: WillisM8@cardiff.ac.uk

The JLS recommends that an initial email inquiry, including an abstract of the proposed article, should be sent in advance of completed articles in order to ensure that the subject matter is suitable for publication under the JLS's remit.

All articles should be from 6000-9000 words in length, interdisciplinary in focus, and offering an original view of both the literary or artistic subject matter and the science or sciences under consideration. While articles on individual examples of literary and artistic production are welcomed, these should also seek to show the wider significance of their analyses and interpretations. The journal does not publish essays focused exclusively on literature or art, or exclusively on the history and philosophy of science.

All submitted articles should be presented in MLA Style, with notes kept to a minimum. JLS articles do not use personal pronouns (e.g. "In this article I will..." is not appropriate, while "This article will..." is appropriate). All spellings should follow British English. All submitted articles should include a short abstract (150 words maximum) below the title and author's name and ahead of the opening sentence.

The JLS aims to complete the first stage of peer review (consideration of articles by the editor and advisory board) within 4 weeks of submission and the second stage of peer review (external, blind, double peer-review) within 8 weeks of the completion of the first stage. All authors whose articles reach the second stage of peer review should expect to have a decision on publication within approximately 12 weeks of the date of their original submission of an article

Citing the JLS: the journal's full title is the Journal of Literature and Science, and its first issue was Volume 1, Number 1 (2007). All page numbers to individual essays can be found when accessing the PDF file of that essay. The journal's ISSN is 1754-646X. Citations should give Author, 'Title,' Journal of Literature and Science Vol, No. (Year): pp., organized according to the specific style guide being used.

The Journal of Literature and Science is committed to real and immediate open access for academic work. All of the JLS's articles and reviews are free to access immediately from the date of publication. There are no author charges (commonly known as APCs) prior to publication, and no charge for any reader to download articles and reviews for their own scholarly use. The JLS does not, therefore, operate either a Gold or Green model of open access, but is free to all at any time and in perpetuity. To facilitate this the JLS depends upon the financial underwriting provided by the University of Westminster's Department of English, the goodwill of its editorial team and advisory board, and the continuing support of its network of peer reviewers.

The Journal of Literature and Science also operates under the Creative Commons Licence CC-BY-NC-ND. This allows for the reproduction of articles, free of charge, for non-commercial use only and with the appropriate citation information. All authors publishing with the JLS accept these as the terms of publication. Please note that copyright of the content of all articles and reviews remains with the designated author of the article or review. Copyright of the layout and design of JLS articles and reviews remains with the Journal of Literature and Science and cannot be used in other publications.

The JLS is a member of PILA (Publishers International Linking Association) and submits all articles and reviews, including all works that these cite, to CrossRef for cross-referral. To find JLS articles and reviews via their DOI numbers, use the URL [http://dx.doi.org/\[DOI number\]](http://dx.doi.org/[DOI number])

Reviews

The JLS reviews articles on literature and science, or relevant articles in cognate fields such as the history of science, cultural studies or sociology, published in academic journals within the last twelve to eighteen months. Reviews are generally commissioned by the Reviews Editor, but potential contributors are encouraged to contact the Reviews Editor to suggest articles for review.

The JLS does not, at any time, review books or collections of essays. The editors take the view that books within the field are already well covered by reviewing journals while journal articles, often the publication type that offers the most recent scholarship, are never considered in review processes. By doing so, the JLS hopes to offer its readers access to academic dialogue on the most recent advances in literature and science.

Reviews should be approximately 750 words in length, should follow MLA Style (notes generally not allowed), and should aim to describe the content of the article under review as well as offer an analysis of its strengths and weaknesses and conclude by assessing its significance for literature and science scholarship.

Proposals for review and completed reviews should be sent to the Reviews Editor, Dr Michelle Geric by email only: m.geric@westminster.ac.uk

Dominique Gracia is a PhD student at the University of Exeter, using theories of media history to examine fin-de-siècle discourses about art-objects in the work of Dante Gabriel Rossetti, Michael Field, Vernon Lee and Oscar Wilde. Other areas of interest include genres of poetry, Victorian masculinity, and representations of mental health. She is the UK Administrative Director for NAVSA's Central Online Victorian Educator (COVE) project and an editor at HARTS&Minds.

Rebecka Klette is a Wellcome Trust-funded PhD Student in History at Birkbeck, University of London, examining the reception and application of degeneration theory in Scandinavian culture and science, 1880-1922. Her research interests concern the History of Medicine, Psychiatry, and Science, and how scientific and medical concepts were consumed in popular culture in the late nineteenth- and early twentieth centuries.

Andrew Lacey, of the Department of English and Creative Writing, Lancaster University, UK, has been Research Assistant on the Davy Letters Project (<http://www.davy-letters.org.uk>) since 2014, in posts funded by the Modern Humanities Research Association and the Arts and Humanities Research Council. He has published several articles on Romantic-period literature, in the Keats-Shelley Review, Notes and Queries, and Romanticism. Alongside Davy, he has current research interests in Romantic-period poetry (especially Shelley and Wordsworth), letters, and the theory and practice of scholarly editing. He studied at Durham and Newcastle Universities, and is a former winner of the Keats-Shelley Memorial Association Keats-Shelley Prize.

Padma V. McKertich teaches in the Department of English, Stella Maris College (Autonomous), Chennai, Tamil Nadu, India. She is the author of Fiction as Window: Critiquing the Indian Literary Cultural Ethos since the 1980s and co-editor of Four Tamil Plays and My Faith and Others, and has translated S. Ramakrishnan's play Aravaan from Tamil to English. She has also written the critical introduction to Othello, which was part of the Philip Weller Annotated Shakespeare Series. Apart from Indian Writing in English and Translation, her teaching and research interests include Literature and Science, Ecocriticism, Critical Theory, and Bhakti Studies.

Jennifer J* Moos is currently working on a doctoral thesis in American Literary and Cultural Studies tentatively titled "The Pleasures of Sleep(ing)." She is the co-editor of four books and has published articles on feminist, gender and queer theories, as well as on "(un-)coolness" and boy band culture. She was a lecturer at Saarland University from 2009-14. In 2015, she joined the University of Zurich's Office for Equal Opportunities.

Rachel Murray is a third year AHRC funded PhD candidate at Bristol and Exeter. Her thesis examines the relationship between modernist aesthetics, entomology, and the figure of the exoskeleton. Her work has been published in The Henry James Review, The Journal of D. H. Lawrence Studies, The Journal of Wyndham Lewis Studies and the James Joyce Broadsheet. She has a chapter forthcoming in the Cultural History of Insects (Bloomsbury, 2019).

V. Shilpa teaches at the Department of English, St. Joseph's College, Bengaluru, Karnataka, India. She has written a critical appreciation of Na. Muthuswamy's play Kattiyakaran and has worked on Literature and Botany for her M.Phil research. Her teaching and research interests include Literature and Science, Bhakti Studies, Advertising, Ecocriticism, and Postcolonial Studies.

Danielle Spratt is an Assistant Professor of English at California State University, Northridge. She is currently a co-chair of the ASECS Science Studies Caucus and is completing a book project on medicine, domesticity, and empire in the early British novel.

Clare Stainthorp has recently submitted an AHRC-funded doctoral thesis at the University of Birmingham on Constance Naden as scientist, philosopher, and poet. She is interested in interdisciplinarity in the nineteenth century, and also has a forthcoming article in Victorian Literature and Culture about the class and gender implications of artificial hands in the Victorian period.

Anne Witchard is Senior Lecturer in English Literature and Cultural Studies at the University of Westminster. She has published widely on pantomime, Chinoiserie, and Orientalism.
