

Volume 11, Number 1 (2018)

ISSN 1754-646X

- 1 Kimberley Dimitriadis
Telescopes in the Drawing Room: Geometry and Astronomy in George Eliot's The Mill on the Floss
- 20 Benjamin P. Lomas
"That Universall and Publik Manuscript": The Book of Nature and The Garden of Cyrus
- 33 Manon Mathias
Pre-Darwinian Species Change: Reincarnation
and Transformism in George Sand's Evenor et Leucippe
- 50 Richard Fallon
"Literature Rather Than Science": Henry Neville
Hutchinson (1856-1927) and the Literary
Borderlines of Science Writing
- 66 Catriona Livingstone
Experimental Identities: Quantum Physics in Popular Science Writing and Virginia Woolf's
The Waves
- 82 Treena Balds
Beckett's Calculus of the Subject: the Performance of Spatial and Self-Relations in
...but the clouds...
- 106 Emilie Walezak
A. S. Byatt, Science, and the Mind/Body
Dilemma

Article Reviews

- 120 Simon Avery
Review of Karen Dieleman's "Evolution and the Struggle of Love in Emily Pfeiffer's Sonnets."

- 122 Ágnes Bató
Review of Rachel Trubowitz’s “Reading Milton and Newton in the Radical Reformation: Poetry, Mathematics, and Religion.”
- 124 Amy M. King
Review of Jim Endersby’s “Deceived by Orchids: Sex, Science, Fiction and Darwin.”
- 126 John C. Murray
Review of Gowan Dawson’s “Dickens, Dinosaurs, and Design.”
- 128 Lucy Wilkinson
Review of Kirsty Martin’s “Modernism and the Medicalization of Sunlight: D.H. Lawrence, Katherine Mansfield and the Sun Cure.”
- 130 Chutian Xiao
Review of Jeffrey Blevin’s “Absolutism, Relativism, Atomism: The ‘small theories’ of T.S. Eliot.”

About the JLS

The Journal of Literature and Science (JLS) is a peer-reviewed academic journal published twice annually in Summer and Winter. The JLS was founded in 2007, and produced its first issue at the beginning of 2008. It was originally hosted by the University of Glamorgan's Research Centre for Literature, Arts and Science (2007-12), before moving to its own independent online site in March 2013, with the support of the University of Westminster. The journal's first, and present, editor is Professor Martin Willis, Professor of English at Cardiff University. The Advisory Board includes leading scholars of literature and science from around the world. The JLS is published in digital format, is entirely open access, and requires no subscription fee.

The journal is dedicated to the publication of academic essays on the subject of literature and science, broadly defined. Essays on the major forms of literary and artistic endeavour are welcome (the novel, short fiction, poetry, drama, periodical literature, visual art, sculpture, radio, film and television). The journal encourages submissions from all periods of literary and artistic history since the Scientific Revolution; from the Renaissance to the present day. The journal also encourages a broad definition of 'science': encapsulating both the history and philosophy of science and those sciences regarded as either mainstream or marginal within their own, or our, historical moment. However, the journal does not generally publish work on the social sciences. Within these confines, essays submitted to the journal may focus on the literary and scientific productions of any nation or group.

All essays should be interdisciplinary in focus, offering an original view of both the literary or artistic subject matter and the science or sciences under consideration. While essays on individual examples of literary and artistic production are welcomed, these should also seek to show the wider significance of their analyses and interpretations. The journal does not publish essays focused exclusively on literature or art, or exclusively on the history and philosophy of science.

Submission and Citation Information

Abstracts and articles for submission should be sent to the Editor, Professor Martin Willis, by email only: WillisM8@cardiff.ac.uk

The JLS recommends that an initial email inquiry, including an abstract of the proposed article, should be sent in advance of completed articles in order to ensure that the subject matter is suitable for publication under the JLS's remit.

All articles should be from 6000-9000 words in length, interdisciplinary in focus, and offering an original view of both the literary or artistic subject matter and the science or sciences under consideration. While articles on individual examples of literary and artistic production are welcomed, these should also seek to show the wider significance of their analyses and interpretations. The journal does not publish essays focused exclusively on literature or art, or exclusively on the history and philosophy of science.

All submitted articles should be presented in MLA Style, with notes kept to a minimum. JLS articles do not use personal pronouns (e.g. "In this article I will..." is not appropriate, while "This article will..." is appropriate). All spellings should follow British English. All submitted articles should include a short abstract (150 words maximum) below the title and author's name and ahead of the opening sentence.

The JLS aims to complete the first stage of peer review (consideration of articles by the editor and advisory board) within 4 weeks of submission and the second stage of peer review (external, blind, double peer-review) within 8 weeks of the completion of the first stage. All authors whose articles reach the second stage of peer review should expect to have a decision on publication within approximately 12 weeks of the date of their original submission of an article

Citing the JLS: the journal's full title is the Journal of Literature and Science, and its first issue was Volume 1, Number 1 (2007). All page numbers to individual essays can be found when accessing the PDF file of that essay. The journal's ISSN is 1754-646X. Citations should give Author, 'Title,' Journal of Literature and Science Vol, No. (Year): pp., organized according to the specific style guide being used.

The Journal of Literature and Science is committed to real and immediate open access for academic work. All of the JLS's articles and reviews are free to access immediately from the date of publication. There are no author charges (commonly known as APCs) prior to publication, and no charge for any reader to download articles and reviews for their own scholarly use. The JLS does not, therefore, operate either a Gold or Green model of open access, but is free to all at any time and in perpetuity. To facilitate this the JLS depends upon the financial underwriting provided by the University of Westminster's Department of English, the goodwill of its editorial team and advisory board, and the continuing support of its network of peer reviewers.

The Journal of Literature and Science also operates under the Creative Commons Licence CC-BY-NC-ND. This allows for the reproduction of articles, free of charge, for non-commercial use only and with the appropriate citation information. All authors publishing with the JLS accept these as the terms of publication. Please note that copyright of the content of all articles and reviews remains with the designated author of the article or review. Copyright of the layout and design of JLS articles and reviews remains with the Journal of Literature and Science and cannot be used in other publications. The JLS is a member of PILA (Publishers International Linking Association) and submits all articles and reviews, including all works that these cite, to CrossRef for cross-referral. To find JLS articles and reviews via their DOI numbers, use the URL [http://dx.doi.org/\[DOI number\]](http://dx.doi.org/[DOI number])

Reviews

The JLS reviews articles on literature and science, or relevant articles in cognate fields such as the history of science, cultural studies or sociology, published in academic journals within the last twelve to eighteen months. Reviews are generally commissioned by the Reviews Editor, but potential contributors are encouraged to contact the Reviews Editor to suggest articles for review.

The JLS does not, at any time, review books or collections of essays. The editors take the view that books within the field are already well covered by reviewing journals while journal articles, often the publication type that offers the most recent scholarship, are never considered in review processes. By doing so, the JLS hopes to offer its readers access to academic dialogue on the most recent advances in literature and science.

Reviews should be approximately 750 words in length, should follow MLA Style (notes generally not allowed), and should aim to describe the content of the article under review as well as offer an analysis of its strengths and weaknesses and conclude by assessing its significance for literature and science scholarship.

Proposals for review and completed reviews should be sent to the Reviews Editor, Dr Michelle Geric by email only: m.geric@westminster.ac.uk

Editorial Board

Editor: Martin Willis

Reviews Editor: Michelle Geric

Editorial Assistants: Rebecca Spear & Jim Scown

Advisory Board: Tim Armstrong, Gowan Dawson, Folkert Degenring, John Holmes, Lisa Hopkins, William Hughes, Kelly Hurley, Meegan Kennedy, Leah Knight, Sharon Ruston, Eleanor Sandry, Jonathan Sawday, Carol A. Senf, Andrew Smith, Laurence Talairach-Vielmas, Jeff Wallace, Alexandra Warwick and Catherine Wynne.

Web design: Martin Callanan

Logo: Joel Cooper

Simon Avery is Reader in Nineteenth-Century Literature and Culture at the University of Westminster. His publications include Elizabeth Barrett Browning, The Poems of Mary Coleridge, Thomas Hardy: A Reader's Guide, the Broadview edition of The Return of the Native and Sex, Time and Place: Queer Histories of London (ed with Katherine M. Graham). He is currently writing a book on the Brontës and politics.

Treena Balds received her M.Phil from the University of the West Indies and her PhD from the University of California, Davis. She has completed research projects on Wole Soyinka, J. M. Coetzee, Tsi Tsi Dangarembga, and Samuel Beckett. An interdisciplinary scholar, she was an active member of UC Davis's ModLab Digital Humanities Laboratory, and her dissertation (completed in 2017) explored mathematical representations in works by Beckett. She has also published critical work on Dangarembga's Nervous Conditions. Treena now lives in Montego Bay and manages an organization for STEAM education, which encourages interdisciplinary scholarship in young students.

Ágnes Bató is working on a doctorate thesis on the Girardian mimetic theory applied to John Milton's Paradise Lost in the University of Szeged, Hungary. Her field of research is the early modern image and mirror metaphor from a cognitive viewpoint, and she also completed research on the sublime and Spanish Renaissance poetry, writing an MA thesis on Luis de Góngora's Las Soledades.

Kimberley Dimitriadis is a PhD student in English at Duke University. Her research interests include studies of nineteenth-century literature and culture, intersections of science and literature, and the Victorian novel. She also holds an M.Phil. from the University of Sydney. Her work has recently appeared in Victorians: A Journal of Culture and Literature.

Richard Fallon is a third-year doctoral researcher in the Victorian Studies Centre at the University of Leicester, funded by the Midlands3Cities Doctoral Training Partnership. He is also part of the PhD cohort at the Natural History Museum, London, and an Associate Project Member of the AHRC-funded Constructing Scientific Communities project. His thesis examines the popularization of dinosaur palaeontology in the transatlantic literary market during the decades around 1900.

Amy M. King is Associate Professor of English and Director of Graduate Studies at St. John's University, in Queens NY. With broad interests in the literature and science of the long nineteenth-century, she is the author of Bloom: the Botanical Vernacular in the English Novel (Oxford UP, 2003) and the forthcoming "The Divine in the Commonplace: Reverent Natural History and the Novel in Britain."

Catriona Livingstone is a PhD researcher at King's College London. Her thesis is entitled "'Embryo Lives': Science and Identity in the Novels of Virginia Woolf" and demonstrates how Woolf's multiple, expansive selves are conceived in dialogue with contemporary popular science writing and broadcasting. It takes in four areas of scientific inquiry – quantum physics, neurology, radio and evolution – and identifies a broad cultural tendency, in which Woolf's later novels participate, of associating scientific concepts with fluid forms of identity. She is currently a contributor to The Year's Work in English Studies journal, responsible for the section on Virginia Woolf.

Benjamin P. Lomas recently completed his BA in English Language and Literature from University College, Oxford. His research focusses on the ways early modern writers and scientists attempted to set the natural world in order. He is currently working as a teacher of mathematics at Ormiston Denes Academy, Lowestoft. From September he will take up an Arts and Humanities Research Council Doctoral Training Partnership Studentship on the MSt in English (1550-1700) at Jesus College, Oxford.

Manon Mathias is a Lecturer in French at the University of Glasgow and is the author of Vision in the Novels of George Sand (OUP: 2016). Her research examines the nineteenth-century French novel in relation to science and medicine. She is currently undertaking a project on the relationship between gut health and the mental wellbeing in nineteenth-century French culture.

John C. Murray is a professor of English literature at Curry College. He specializes in Victorian studies. His publications include, Technologies of Power in the Victorian Period: Print Culture, Human Labor, and New Modes of Critique in Charles Dickens's Hard Times, Charlotte Brontë's Shirley, and George Eliot's Felix Holt (2010). He currently serves as assistant editor of Book Reviews at The British Society for Literature and Science website.

Emilie Walezak is a senior lecturer at Université Lumière Lyon 2. A specialist of contemporary British literature, she is the author of Rose Tremain. A Critical Introduction, Palgrave Macmillan, 2017.

Lucy Wilkinson is a GP, writer and clinical lecturer at Manchester University. Her most recent short fiction is forthcoming with Bluemoose Books (Seaside Stories, May 2018).

Chutian Xiao is a PhD candidate in English at Durham University. His major interest is in modernist and contemporary poetry and he has recently published an article, "The Stillness in Movement: A Buddhist reading of T. S. Eliot's Ash-Wednesday" in Exchanges", The Warwick Research Journal (2017).